EDITORIAL.

We are often guided by the appearance of the doorway in our appreciation of a new and unexplored building and we hope to have suggested by the preceding composition by Miss P. Mitten that the current issue of "Agrimag" will be both satisfying to the exacting critic, and interesting to our contemporaries.

Thanks must be registered to Mr. J. O. Day for his help with the publicity and for his experienced advice on financial matters, and to Mr. J. Iddon for editing the Magazine until other and more pressing work caused him to resign.

We are glad to say that this year our offers of substantial prizes for literary work submitted for publication have met with great success, and they have been awarded to Miss J. Morley, for the article "Turnips", and to Miss M. Betts for "A Sonnett". The standard of entries was high, and congratulations are due to all who tried so hard, for it is to them that the credit must go for the quality of this session's publication.

Finally, a word for those of us who are about to seek new fields at home and abroad, with particular reference to Mr. E. Lamming, who has been awarded a grant to enable him to visit the U.S.A. To all of you, our best wishes, and perhaps our envious glances, follow you wherever you may go, and may success crown all your efforts.

THE EDITOR.

The Magazine Committee, on behalf of all students, offer their sincere congratulations to Miss M. E. Nichols on her recent engagement to Mr. L. H. Bannister.

THE DIRECTOR'S REVIEW.

This year my review must cover the beginnings of our work as a University School of Agriculture. That experience is interesting in itself, but it is just a beginning. The Loveday Committee was very correct in its convictions that an agricultural college does not change its status overnight and become a University department of agriculture merely by wishful thinking. We are still in the process of learning much at all levels, and in spheres that concern staff and students alike. It would be wrong to deny that we have had our teething troubles and our growing pains, but these are always incidental to normal progress. Nothing has taken place however that has caused my faith to be shaken in the developments that concern our present and future.

A great interest has been shown in the events that have taken place at Sutton Bonington. A year ago I thought it would take us a long time to lose our former title. In actual fact the change has been accepted readily, even in our own immediate area. Next session the name of the Midland Agricultural College will be recognised by students chiefly as a memory of the past. This of itself is no valid reason for failing to honour the pioneer efforts of those who made possible the Midland Agricultural College before it developed into its present important status or of not recognising what has been a powerful name in agricultural education for over fifty years.

The customary progress that it has been my privilege to relate for the past fourteen years has assumed even greater significance this year. Last summer vacation provided us with opportunities to re-organise the top floor of the main building for the teaching of applied biology, which included the equipment of laboratories for the teaching of bacteriology and plant physiology. The new glasshouse scheme that has been under discussion for so long is now nearing completion at a cost of nearly £13,000, while four new cottages are well under way. But we have a long way to go yet before we have settled the essential needs for our new responsibilities. Things do not get done these days by merely waving a wand, but the University Grants Committee has proved to be a very good fairy godmother to us in making available much of the means that are essential for progressive development. Plans have been made for the provision of a new dining hall, so as to take over the existing dining hall for use as a library. We have hopes that the new refectory will be ready in time for next session, but the first brick has yet to be laid.

Equally important to our work are equipment and staffing. Again we are greatly indebted to the University Grants Committee for the means they have made available to permit the rapid build-up in essential equipment that is needed for teaching at the University level. £12,000 has been provided by way of non-recurrent grant for this purpose in the present academic year. The build-up in staff at the present is controlled by the difficulty of finding the type of people we want and we have preferred to wait until we have been satisfied that the right people have been found. This has imposed additional responsibilities on existing staff, but we shall be much better served next season.

Staff changes have been numerous. Miss W. Donaldson, of the dairy department and Miss B. Birkitt of the poultry department, resigned to get married, and in their place we welcome Miss Ruth Potts, B.Sc. and Miss M. L. Gaughan, N.D.P., Mr. R. Anderson in the department of Agricultural Economics has left to join Dr. Makings in Southern Rhodesia, and Mr. I. H. Smith, M.Sc. from the Ministry of Agriculture has been appointed Senior Agricultural Economist, which is a newly created post. Miss E. M. Graham, B.Sc. from the University of Reading has taken up duties as Demonstrator in Bacteriology, while Mr. J. Chatterton, B.Sc. was appointed Assistant Lecturer in Farm Engineering. Mr. O. D. McGuire took up his duties in April as Lecturer in Building Construction in succession to Mr. J. N. Dominy whose reputation as an agricultural architect grows steadily. A new appointment of an administrative assistant has also been made in the person of Mr. A. Wainwright, B.Com. who is relieving me of much of the routine administrative work of the School of Agriculture. A number of new appointments are being made for next session. After many years as Lecturer in Zoology, Mr. E. Holden is taking over the responsibility for the development of beekeeping teaching and research and is being succeeded by Mr. D. K. McE. Kevan, B.Sc. an Entomologist at present in the Colonial Service in Kenya. Mr. J. D. Ivins, B.Sc., who for the past two years has been Crop Recorder for the N.I.A.B. at Sutton Bonington is joining the staff as assistant lecturer in agriculture. Perhaps the most interesting of the new appointments however is that of Mr. J. P. Hudson, G.M., M.B.E., B.Sc., N.D.H., the first Midland Agricultural College student to get a degree in horticulture who is returning from New Zealand to become lecturer in horticulture with special reference to glasshouse crops.

Departmental activities have given cause for satisfaction in many respects. I think it can be said with every confidence that we have built up a well-balanced horticultural department in a surprisingly short space of time. The new orchard came into serious production last summer and the quality of fruit was such that the exhibit of Cox's Orange Pippin apples received a Gold Medal award at the Annual Fruit and Chrysanthemum show in Nottingham. On the farming side the herd of Shorthorn dairy cattle was awarded the Shorthorn Society's Silver Medal for the highest yielding Shorthorn herd in Nottinghamshire with an average of 8,636 lbs. of milk from 52 cows. We have begun to lose count of the collection of silver medals in this particular competition, but since 1930 most of the Shorthorn awards have come to Sutton Bonington.

Academically staff have had a busy time developing the new degree courses in anticipation of the granting of the Charter creating the University of Nottingham. An endeavour has been made to create courses that will harmonise with true University needs and our courses will not be a hotch potch of all the subjects that might be of interest to farming or gardening. It must be recognised that our diploma courses are in the last stages of existence, but I am confident that the provision of degree courses as visualised will meet a long felt need and contribute to the development of a still more famous future for the College at Sutton Bonington. In this connection it is hoped that we shall also be able to provide courses at degree level that will enhance also the needs of dairying and poultry husbandry.

Lock - Mr. Kuylen Bridge.

DAWN AT POOLE HARBOUR

The wings of morning beat upon the sky ;
The clouds sweep back, drawn by the sighing wind ;
The greyness of the sea is crisped to white,
Where curling waves crest gently in their rows.
Dimly the forms of birds come floating on the gusts ;
Their cries are muted, still caught in chains of sleep.
The boats at their anchors pull on the flowing tide,
Tossing a little to the ocean's play.
Through the falling rain the island darkly rises,
The ancient tapestry of nature weaving eternally.
The trees in their sombre greens hiding the castle,
The beauty of it slowly revealing.

ANON.

CLIMBING THE GROSSE SCHEIDEGG PASS

To anyone who knows the mountains of Switzerland in their indescribable beauty and almost terrifying grandeur, this story will perhaps bring back to mind some holiday spent exploring their wonders, or gazing up at them from sunny valleys.

Not for our party, however, the proud paraphernalia of accomplished climbers, we were only attempting one of the lesser giants and did not intend navigating any perilous "chimneys" or deep crevasses. With the prospect of a long day's climb before us, we started off in brilliant sunshine for Meiringen and the first gentle wooded slopes. The gay little mountain railway slid almost noiselessly past us to its terminus at the famous Reichenbach Falls ; we too, paused at the little station, to gaze in awe at the tremendous cascade of water roaring incessantly past, drowning all speech in its foaming, headlong descent ; while the fine spray was blown about us like a delicate summer mist and cooled our already heated brows.

Soon the trees thinned slightly and on turning one of the hundreds of bends in the road, a pleasant mountain pasture came into view—with neat little wooden huts and fences, extremely friendly cows, each with a different sized bell hanging jangling from her neck, making a pleasant melodious sound as we passed. In striking contrast, a much louder melody forced itself upon our ears, a Swiss mountain bus was approaching, announcing its passage up the tortuous road by a practically continuous use of its horn. As this horn had four quite musical notes, it could be heard a good few minutes before it put in an appearance, giving us and any other people, ample time to remove ourselves from the roadway.

A little further on we sat on a small bridge to eat lunch, and watched the chattering stream as it rushed away, soon to join the mighty torrent that had so impressed us at the falls.

Rosenlaui—the destination of the musical bus, was soon reached and passing on to a narrow mountain path, we really started to climb. Every now and then we saw tiny signposts, these, instead of miles or kilometres, bore the time taken to reach the summit of the pass. We passed one or two chalets, used by people on long climbs, who came up to spend the night there and make an early start the next morning. A glacier we saw at close quarters was an unforgettable sight, with incredible, vivid, blue-green cracks and fissures. This slow moving river of ice wound its way down from the snow on the summits, past the rocks and crags, into the wooded valleys, to melt and become part of the streams below.

By now it was considerably cooler and the sun, unfortunately, had departed, as though it felt it belonged to the peaceful valleys and left the wilder mountain tops to wind, rain and even snow. Once, a party of young Swiss boys passed us, with heavy boots, rucksacks, "alpenstocks", little Swiss caps and a cheery "Guten Tag"—leaving us feeling extremely English and somewhat out of breath! We were getting to the last thousand feet, scrambling up tiny pebbly paths and through rocky gullies. Coming out from these onto a tiny patch of grass, we saw a neat little hut—to our amazement, as we peered at it curiously, a large snout appeared with attendant grunts and a pair of beady eyes: a pig was regarding us solemnly through a small swing door, which allowed it to come and go at will and yet remain closed.

It was raining now, with a steady persistency and a strong wind had begun to blow, making us anxious to reach the top and cups of hot coffee in the rest hut. Indeed, we were gazing down so intently, that we almost missed a little shelter—but at the side of the track, full of climbers of various nationalities, sheltering on either their upward or downward journeys. In the last hundred yards or so to the summit we had a veritable battle with the wind, our legs felt like leaden weights and the rain stung our cheeks. It was the youngest member of the party who suddenly called out, that he could see a large hut not far away. Without another word we converged upon it very thankfully and peeled off our wet raincoats, hanging them on high wooden pegs, with many others, where, by the time we came out, they had made a small lake of drips on the floor.

A cheery fire in a large room greeted us and a pigtailed Swiss girl soon appeared with enormous steaming cups of excellent coffee and delicious biscuits. Having eaten and drunk our fill, we rested as long as we dared and then went outside again.

The sight that met our eyes simply begged description—the wind had died down, the rain had ceased; in place of a misty half-world of phantom rocks and indistinct shapes, there was a great valley sweeping down before us, at whose feet lay Grindelwald, seemingly protected by the great snow-capped mountains lying around it. On our left, rising sheer to the blue sky, was the great "Wetterhorn", monarch of all he surveyed, towering over the 6,000 foot high pass like some mighty protector, like the national hero himself, Wilhelm Tell.

The rest of the journey was delightful, the way easy and wonderful scenery all around us. The descent was more gradual, Grindelwald lying fairly high. We came down into the village in the late afternoon, with quite a few longing looks back at the wild mountain pass of a few hours ago—now placid and smiling in the evening sun.

ON WRITING AN ARTICLE FOR THE MAGAZINE.

Have you ever tried to write an article for the magazine? If you haven't, here is a piece of sound advice—don't! I've been sitting here for at least two hours and the result is one badly mutilated pencil.

Don't misunderstand me though, this isn't just the first half hearted attempt, far from it. For the past few weeks, ever since I decided that I must concoct something for the mag. I have been walking in a daze with my brain working overtime.

I started by thinking of agricultural subjects, but after the exam. results were put up it seemed that that wasn't my line at all.

The next thought was to higher fields, perhaps something about the ancients. The idea being brought about by a chance remark of Heather's, on Diogenes and his barrel, when she was thinking about an article too. Anyway that seemed to be rather a crib so that was also dropped.

No, I should have to come down to something more mundane, but what should it be, an article on housekeeping perhaps? That subject was quickly discarded though, as it would be playing straight into Regbie's hands.

Perhaps a story would solve the difficulty, but to discover a new plot was hopeless, and even harder to think of than a subject to write about.

At last I had it—my article should be on "This Modern Socialism". I felt quite inspired by the title, when to my consternation I realised that we had at least one or two people who would be furious at my treatment of the subject, so being rather weak in the arm I decided that the line of least resistance would be best.

This quite deflated me for a while, but back came the old spirit, this time to write on the Heath Robinson wireless in the Common Room, where one of the modesty curtain rods, much to Miss Tonathy's chagrin, has to be propped up for an aerial before a sound will emerge; unfortunately that subject was disposed of in one sentence.

So here I am with a ruined pencil, a ruined brain and a last despairing plea—don't ever try to write for the mag.!

M.E.A.

....., THAT IS THE QUESTION.

Every small boy has an innate urge to shave. During his years of adolescence many a furtive glance is cast in the mirror, and many a furtive finger feels hopefully for the first outcroppings of the manly growth. When the new razor makes its maiden voyage round that youthful sea of downy fur the thrill is equalled only by that experienced on smoking the first cigarette.

Time passes, and with it that youthful exuberance. The change in feeling is slow but inevitable, and the early affection for the razor fades, leaving not even a pleasant memory. That once much-prided possession becomes a mere inanimate object, a lump of soulless steel, but later it takes unto itself a satanic tendency to explore other than the bearded areas, according to whims of its own.

The young man, disillusioned, now wonders how others fare. His outstanding observation is that other chaps' razors are far better than his. As a result of this, three courses appear to be open to him; they are:—

- (1) To try a cut-throat razor;
- (2) To try one of those complicated affairs, stiff with gear-wheels and sounding like Bren guns;
- (3) To press on regardless.

The cut-throat scheme undoubtedly has its attractions, the chief of these being the ease with which experienced users sweep grandly down the straight stretches and manoeuvre the corners with complete unconcern. The tyro is warned against this, however. The vast cutting edge of this weapon becomes uncontrollable in his trembling hand; its very sharpness is his undoing. While he watches the inner end do its stuff, the far end goes off on sorties of its own, quietly collecting odd trophies from ear or neck. The havoc wrought thus is not noticed, so subtle is the incision, until a crimson trail has sneaked its way downwards and a warm sticky feeling becomes apparent in the region of the collar-bone.

Even after mastering the art of wielding this tool (a scything action is not recommended) there still remains the question of maintenance. The enthusiast, however, takes this in his stride, stropping cheerfully, and, if he be so inclined, singing loudly at the same time.

The second possibility gives rise to problems of a different nature. While the fitting of a smaller blade considerably reduces the loss of living tissue, much time and energy must be expended to obtain a sharp edge. This is done by shooting the blade rapidly up and down a small strop, the position of the blade being controlled by a complex train of gears and levers, which at the slightest excuse will disintegrate into its component parts, leaving the owner bearded and disgruntled (strained relations at breakfast are sure to ensue).

In any case, the noise of stropping causes such uprising in the neighbourhood that the use of the implement is out of the question.

There is nothing left, then, but to improve our technique. Observe closely the fearful grimaces of a fellow-shaver. These may be (a) to tighten the skin; (b) to resist the pull of the razor; or

(c) sheer agony. If (c), then move on, and leave him to suffer in solitude . . . its kinder. If tightening the skin is the aim of his facial contortions, note particularly the use of the jaw muscles. While shaving the left cheek, it is essential that the lower left teeth be hooked firmly round the upper right ones. This makes for a firm surface, and reduces vibration. Tightening the skin under the neck is achieved by tipping the head smartly back, thus exposing the Adam's apple to a direct attack. If the number of chins precludes this possibility, it is permitted to seize the upper two chins between the thumb and forefinger of the spare hand, at the same time tipping the head back as before. This levels out all remaining chins, but care should be taken not to dislocate the neck, as difficulty will be experienced in returning to the neutral position.

To avoid domestic strife, certain post-operational rules of etiquette should be strictly adhered to. Never mop up the carnage with the best towel in sight. The flannel may be used in emergencies, provided it is neatly folded and well hidden under the soap.

Wiser men than I have failed to find sound reasons for not shaving. The sore-face theory carries little weight; the plaintive tale of a late night with the boys receives no sympathy. Probably the only men to be granted exemption are the front-row forwards of a Rugby team the day before a match, on the grounds of terrorizing their opposite numbers and conserving their strength (see Samson). Unfortunately, this tends to form a habit which must be broken during the cricket season.

Lastly, one weary of daily routine, may entertain thoughts of a beard, but only strong-minded men or bachelors have the will or the opportunity to see the plan through to its bitter end. Morale usually breaks down after the first week, when the appalling sight of a scrub-ilke growth is too much for a sensitive soul. The agonizing jungle-clearing which ensues leaves the poor wretch so penitent that he embarks on his daily shave with a masochistic glee for at least three weeks.

There is nothing for it, my friend, but to shave on.

THE DEATH OF SARPEDON.

Sarpedon, hero of the host, is dead ;
 Yet, even in that last wild charge he led
 The cheering tribes, unmindful of his wound :
 Though the heavenly trump did clearly sound
 Calling away his soul to sit beside
 The Gods, this man who with Achilles vied ;
 This man, the first to scale the Grecian wall.
 Like some tall pine felled by the axe, his fall.
 For Helen's beauty he had travelled far,
 To lead the Trojans in their bloody war
 For their golden prize, famed throughout the world :
 To gain whose favour men had gladly hurled
 Themselves to certain death against her foes.
 His sword would flicker as a spring bee's tongue,
 Wherever the Trojan legions flung
 Themselves, relentless as a storm chased wave
 To break, as spray, on lines which never gave :
 And run for Troy's protection, save this one,
 Whose death, even as the sinking winter sun
 Heralds the night, leaves this ancient town foredoomed.

REALISATION.

The nurse smiled and her lips moved, yet I heard nothing, thinking I was not yet fully conscious she turned and was about to go. I called her back, strange, although I could have sworn I had spoken I heard no sound. Then like the rushing of stormy waters came the overpowering thought. I couldn't hear her. I couldn't hear myself. I was deaf! I gradually slipped into a haze of muddled thinking and echoing through my mind came Hamlet's words, "and the rest is silence". Silence! I was cut off, entombed, shrouded in a world of perpetual silence.

Several weeks had passed, and the car accident which had left me stone deaf was now only a blurred unpleasant memory. I returned home, but not for long. My father, a rich man, insisted on my taking a holiday. So now, on a late June night I was reclining before an electric fire, in my First Class cabin on board the "Empress of Ethiopia". "The Times" lay crumpled on the floor. I half turned to reach a cigar out of the box on the table and my glance fell on a shelf of books, above the sherry decanter. I noticed a thin blue book, queer how small things catch the eye. I stretched out and flicked over its pages. A collection of Keat's Poems. I hadn't read much of his works, but what I had read I had enjoyed.

"Beauty is Truth, Truth Beauty—that is all,
Ye know on earth, and all ye need to know."

I re-read the lines, and in my depressed, newly embittered mind this thought flashed like forked lightning against a darkened sky. "Beauty is Truth, Truth Beauty". The appreciation of music, of the theatre and of eloquence was now gone for ever, only the memory remained for me.

Had I enough faculties left? I had my sight, and those immortal paintings by the old masters still sent a thrill of pleasure through me. I could appreciate Nature in all her majesty, although I could no longer hear the birds singing, surely the scent of a spring morning was enough?

I took another draw at my cigar. The smoke wisped upwards, I gazed musingly at it and saw the light through a fog of smoke. I think often truth is shrouded by our own mental fog. The smoke of the cigar dissolved into nothingness. I thought how all my plans and ambitions had dissolved after the accident. Yet there was something left, the will to go on, to enjoy new pleasures, join in new pursuits, to develop fully those gifts and faculties which still remained.

My left hand hung lazily over the chair arm. A soft, warm body rubbed against it. I glanced down at my spaniel who was wagging his tail, his ears pricked to hear my voice. Grand dog! When we went shooting again only he would hear the crack of the guns and the shrill screams of flying birds.

The soft light, throwing shadows round the table curtained the bowl of roses. Their delicate colours glowed like stained glass in a shadowy nave. Their perfume sweetened the air around them, and I recalled the quaint old village, the cottage gardens overflowing with roses blooming in the early morning.

It was midnight. Time! That relentless ruler of all our lives. What shall I do with all the time at my disposal—let it slip away?

No! I will gaze into my silent future, full of hope. I will realise that there is beauty and truth to be found everywhere. There are many places to visit, many more friends to make, sciences to explore and arts to appreciate. With the passing of time my horizon will grow until its borders know no end.

FOOD!

Outside the place 'tis understood
That College meals are really good,
But students shoot a different line;
They say the food is not so fine—
The guillotine is most erratic,
The width of bread is never static.
It's either hunks the jaw to tire
Or dainty wisps to whet desire.
If 'twasn't known we should have guessed
Bacteriophage has had the rest!

With fish to stimulate the brain
(Never show me fish again!)
None should fail at end of term
Those high percentages to earn.
Onions come up before every dance,
Repeatedly spoiling the chance of romance.
On Sundays the cherries are always brought in,
Fossilized stones surrounded by skin.

Although we moan "the food is bad",
We're looking well on what we've had!

"FAMISHED".

A SONNET.

Go as a laughing ghost—if go you must
Go as you've always gone through all the years,
As an armoured knight, and don't betray your trust:
With proud undaunted face and unshed tears.
Go and face Death, go and come back again
With Memory at your side and as your friend.
Remember, you said, "There's sunshine after rain",
And even Evil things must have an end.
But once before you go—just let me say
Whatever else you do—keep honour dear
And even when it's hard, let Yea be Yea.
Go now, with pounding heart and outwit fear.
I never saw those brown eyes laugh again,
War took his life:

Peace gave it back—INSANE.

LAND GIRL'S SONG.

The light and shade on a horse's coat,
The cool dark shadow of a spreading oak,
The gleeful buck of a long-legged foal,
The crumbling hillock of a small black mole,
The contented cuddling of our Shorthorn herd,
The wild sweet call of a love-lost bird,
The yellow of the tansy, and the purple of the thistle,
The sharp piercing note of kingfisher's whistle—
These are the things that start Landgirls singing:
They are the essence of life, the spirit of living.

THE EXMOORS OF THE QUANTOCKS.

We met at Triscombe Stone one misty September morning when the hills were shrouded in swirls of fog and only the East gave promise of sun. The breath of our ponies hung on the air, and those that had just arrived had heaving flanks from the long upward climb. A plan of the round-up was discussed and decided upon, and the ponies and one or two cobs moved off in small groups forming a fan across the hill.

Little could be seen then, but soon the sun broke through, melting and dispersing the mists, leaving a clear blue sky, and bright sunshine, but the air was cold with a hint of frost. Our group of ponies moved silently along a sheep track, but for the brushing of the crisp, dry bracken. Our eyes were continually scanning the open hillside for dark objects resembling hill ponies, and eventually we saw a group grazing the rough herbage some distance away. We halted beneath some beech trees out of sight, and waited until a group of horsemen appeared on a further point of the hill. One of us moved away from the trees, and standing up in his stirrups, drew the attention of the riders. We watched him point towards the ponies which were still placidly grazing. One of the riders appeared to point his crop towards a fold in the gills, and by his gesticulating we gathered that he had seen a second group of Exmoors. Our ponies became restless, and the group we could see on the hillside appeared suspicious and began to move away from us. We followed still at a walk, for we knew if we frightened them into a gallop at this stage they would break away and disturb others in the round-up.

We were heading for Butterfly Coombe, or rather the village of Holford, which lies hemmed in by steep, thickly wooded hills at the head of the coombe. The coombe itself is comparatively narrow and we knew that once we had the ponies careering down the sides of the stream below, we would have no difficulty in driving them into the wooden pens constructed for the round-up.

Eventually the ponies reached the top of the hill and for a brief second, each was a silhouette against the blue sky and from this point the fun began.

When the Exmoors reached the top, they saw other ponies, and with one accord, quickened their paces until they came alongside their fellows, and all broke into a surging gallop, the youngsters out-distancing the mares. Now was the time for us to use our heels. The horsemen on the left (the Taunton Vale side) sat tight for a rough ride and cantered as fast as they dared down the hillside. No horse can beat a young Exmoor for nimble agility down the face of a hill covered with tough wiry heather, brambles and rabbit holes. When they reached the flat, the better bred cobs began to out-distance the ponies and gradually to head them off to the right. Then we who were on the right, made a sweeping semi-circle, the horsemen behind us completing it. A dark stallion was now leading the herd and suddenly he attempted to double back through a gap between us, but we were ready for him with shouts and cracking whips, and once more he turned towards the coombe. This time we drove them hard, and the twenty odd ponies scrambled down through the oak scrub to the bottom of the coombe. Some of us followed at a more leisurely pace, and stopped to give our ponies the chance of a drink at the cold bubbling spring flowing from a rock. Here the ground was swampy and as they drank the ponies sank over their fetlocks in the cool olive and yellowy green mosses. The other riders skirted the sides of the coombe to prevent any lively spirits breaking away from the herd and scampering up the sides of the coombe. We drove the ponies on, following the stream until we came to the fenced enclosure. The wild ponies were by now terrified but with the plunging, rearing and whickering neighs, they were safely enclosed—a surging mass of browns and bays. All had long tangled manes and tails, and each a mealy nose; with their frightened but beautiful brown eyes, they regarded us from inside the fence.

It is a sad day for the ponies when the youngsters are separated from the herd, taken to Bridgewater fair and sold to good, bad, and indifferent owners. A few are lucky and are trained carefully as children's riding ponies, but many are roughly broken when they are still as wild as hawks, and never overcome their instinctive nervousness towards humans.

One might ask why they are not left alone to lead their wild hill life, but the hills are poor, and cannot support many ponies as well as herds of deer. If the ponies were to leave the hills and live a more sedate life on lowland pasture, they would soon lose their hardiness, and in all Britain there is no breed of pony so full of character and with so wild a beauty as the pure bred Exmoor.

ROSEMARY POWELL.

TURNIPS.

These last two rows should be finished by milking time.

No cause for killin' mesen neither.

I likes a job of hoeing, slow and space all round you, makes you start thinking, but thinking ain't for us farm chaps, the less we thinks the better.

Leave that for folks as 'as got brains and nought better to do.

Funny thing, how these old weeds 'as taken a bashing from me, yet still they keeps a-striving and a-coming, like they was only happy when they was straining to be master, spreading out and choking the seeds what was put in by folks.

Them old weeds thinks nobody's got no business but them, livin' in the land.

Like some folks ain't never satisfied only when they're Lord Almighty.

I reckon these roots 'as beaten them now, and good feed for th' old cows. Back end, Guy, won't they half enjoy themselves when they get their teeth stuck into 'em.

Teeth—they old aches starting again, Missus may well talk to 'ave 'em all out.

Just like that she says—" 'ave 'em all out"—catch me 'ave a mouthful of false chokers, laying 'em out side of me plate to eat—fair put me off me grub, never eat a thing, pine away I should like the heifer.

The heifer—poor critter it were cruel the sights of her, with her bones stickin' out and her skin hanging on her like an old sack, chucked over her backbone.

Johnny's disease or summat that young vet said—caused by a Bactery.

Likely thing—that old Bactery said to itself—now I'll take me along and get in yon heifer and eat her away till she lays down dead.

I'll be damned if I never 'eard a better yarn than that.

No, that heifer knowed as she were going to die, she knowed when she was a little calf. Real fond of that heifer I was, and took care on her, see'd her eyes, that used to watch me, and them eyes was haunted.

Then folks tries to tell me as things can be done in the world to make it better or wuss, and them long-eared Johnnies invents things, when all the time there's nought 'appens as worn't meant to, and men die when they will die.

Like this old thistle.

Though I doubt but it won't leave summat be'ind to show as it's been there, like me leavin' our 'Arry and our Ivy.

Our Ivy—soft as grease she is and our Missus stickin' up for 'er, never make ought of nought that girl won't.

Our 'Arry neither.

Them old cows waiting patiently by the gate think I've deserted them tonight they will.

No that's a thing them old cows know wouldn't never 'appen. 'Ceptin' if the world should give over.

MEDITATIONS IN SEASON

A Translation from the Chinese of Pe Ping Yen.

When I have a spare moment I shall clean my window
So that I may see more clearly :
Mark how the sunlight ripples on the leaf-screen
And further on there is a blush of blossom :
It is pity that we go down before the strawberries,
And do not return until after the apples.
The face of the building opposite is in shadow
And the glare dazzles :
From yonder window someone's blue silk underwear
Is hanging out to dry :
I am rather partial to blue silk underwear,
Preferably occupied.
It is curious how young men are, collectively,
All boys together :
But one would still advise them to screen the shower windows.
Hark ! I hear the sound of many voices ;
Something is happening :
Someone is leaving a room in the upper story
By means of the drainpipe
Only to re-enter by the nearest ground-floor window.
Here is one setting forth with a blanket on his shoulder.
Botany is a pleasing occupation
When the weather is salubrious
And one has an agreeable companion.
In that corner room a group with glasses
Gaily toss the contents down their throats :
I wonder if they are drinking lemonade ?
Yes, I shall certainly have to clean my windows.

A MAIDEN BETRAYED

A Translation from the Chinese of Howa Bout Yu.

I am from Sutton Bonington ;
I have come a long way, into town with a purpose,
Looking for a fair young man
Who said he was an engineer from Derby.
We met over a cup of coffee
Making desultory conversation
And arranged to meet again that evening
But did not.
Somehow I do not think that I shall find him
Since I do not know his name
His friends, or where he lives ;
Since I have forgotten what he looks like.
I am from Sutton Bonington,
I am looking for a fair young man ;
But who tonight will watch with me the moon rise
Over the cherry trees ?

AGRICULTURAL CO-OPERATION IN SWEDEN

During a tour of Sweden in 1947, I learned something of the way in which Producer Co-operation can help agriculture.

Before entering into details of their co-operative scheme, a brief account of Swedish agriculture will serve to show the background against which this scheme has to work.

The farming as a whole is based on similar lines to those found in Britain. Namely a large number of smallholdings with a few large farms here and there.

The farms are of the mixed farming type, the emphasis being laid on the dairying side of the enterprise. The stock on these farms consists in the main of cattle, pigs and horses, few sheep being kept. Most farms have a large area of forest attached to them, which not only supplies fuel, but also provides a steady annual income, at the same time employing men and horses on really remunerative work during the winter months.

Having attempted to give a brief review of the conditions prevailing in Sweden, I will now attempt briefly to outline the organisation and work of the Producer Co-operative Organisations.

This system of Farmers' Co-operative Organisations was evolved in 1930 when agriculture in Sweden, and the rest of the world, was at a very low level, in fact, on the verge of bankruptcy.

Some means of counteracting this depression was essential, and Swedish farmers found it in Co-operative Organisations, which performed their work efficiently, and hence continue to flourish, and not sink into oblivion as was the case in many other countries, where due to restrictive practices many organisations of this type crumpled and finally went bankrupt.

The Central Organisation in Sweden, which controls all the other organisations, is built up of thirteen branch organisations each branch being specific, for example, S.M.R., which deals with all milk sales.

Each branch organisation (e.g., S.M.R.) is made up of several local organisations which are essentially firms run on private enterprise lines, the capital of each firm being provided by the farmers, each of which own shares in one or more local organisations. The number of shares which each farmer is entitled to hold in each organisation is determined according to his production of the material in question; for example, in the case of a local dairy a farmer will be allowed to hold so many shares per cow.

A farmer can and often does belong to more than one organisation, for instance he may belong to the Milk, Eggs, Meat and Timber organisation. It is not binding on farmers to enter the organisation (c.f., M.M.B. in England), but those in the organisations are the most prosperous farmers.

Details of all Branch Organisations and their membership would be out of place here, but in most cases 80—90% of the farmers producing a particular article are members of the organisation selling that product. The actual dairy (or other local trading post) is run on a profit making basis, each member getting a share of the profits, and they aim to cut down consumer prices, stimulate sales and maintain or increase producer prices by cutting out the middle men.

The above refers to the actual trading branches of the central organisation, this latter has affiliated to it branches which directly or indirectly help the farmer, for instance legal and statistical departments.

The central organisation is also responsible for the Co-operative Agricultural College at Sarga-Saby.

The above is a very brief outline of producer co-operation in Sweden, a system which does not destroy the individualism of the farmer, in fact, it encourages efficiency. There is no equivalent system in England, and I doubt whether a similar system could be employed here, but if it could, would it be a reply to the LUCAS REPORT? I leave this, a very pertinent yet real question, for your discussion.

SOME IMPRESSIONS OF FARMING IN FRANCE

This article is merely a personal impression gleaned from a glimpse of part of the Loire country, thus it may contain inaccuracies, and for these I apologise.

For most of our stay we were guests at a chateau near Boen. The village is in the basin bounded by the fertile Loire Valley on the east, and the mountains on the west. The latter, although poorer land, is none the less intensely worked by the peasants who live there, and who eke out an existence with their goats and vineyards on the terraced slopes.

The majority of farms on the plains are also of small or medium size, and worked by the peasants who have owned them for generations. In many instances the laws of family inheritance have resulted in one man owning several absurdly small strips of land which are scattered over the district. The war, scarcity, and the child of these—the Black Market—have made many of these farmers comparatively rich. There is no strictly applied price-control, and the farmer sells his produce to the buyer who gives him most money—a six-score pig is worth the equivalent of £50 to the right man. In most cases the money is hoarded, and the method of husbandry and way of life remains primitive. The cattle are of doubtful ancestry, oxen work the land, and the potato fields are carpeted with Colorado beetles.

The farm attached to the Chateau is 500 hectares and is the biggest within a radius of 40 kilometres. Only one field has ever been ploughed, and this is now a self-seeded pasture. A breeding herd of 30 pedigree Charrollais cows (a white beef breed) grazes the meadows throughout the year, plus the home-bred fattening steers and other younger stock, making about 100 head in all, none of which has ever been inside a shed. The heavy clay soil has never been drained or cultivated, and the fields receive no artificial manures, yet the hay from them keeps the cattle alive in the winter, and during the summer they wax fat on the grass. The steers are ready to slaughter at 3½ years. One man rides round them each day and no other labour is needed. Primitive husbandry—yes, but in this case both practical and economical.

We visited one dairy farm of 300 hectares which carries about 50 cows of the Hollandais type, averaging 650 gals. each. All the cattle had been inoculated against T.B. which is the only method advocated for combating the disease. All the milk is compulsorily pasteurised, but there is only sufficient to guarantee a supply to expectant mothers and children, and even this is inadequate. To the honest man butter is unobtainable.

The largest and most efficient agricultural unit we saw was the thoroughbred stud and training stables. These were run in conjunction with each other, and were entirely self-supporting on the produce from 2,000 hectares. France has not sufficient food for her citizens, but she has plenty for her horses; yet if the rest of the land was managed as well as this section there would be enough for all.

The general movement from the land to the towns during the past 50 years has increased recently; this is causing an acute labour shortage throughout the whole country, especially of skilled workers. The inevitable crisis is temporarily postponed by prisoner labour, but when these are repatriated there will be no substitutes, except for a few immigrants from neighbouring countries.

As urgent as the necessity for manpower, and a possible explanation of the lack of it, is the need for mechanisation. Equipment of every kind is required, especially tractors, which can only be obtained through the official grey market channels. Even a hayrake is acquired by bartering it for a fat bullock, unless another farmer wants it, and can offer two fat bullocks.

French farming has a long way to go before it can be put on an economic basis. The Agricultural Co-operative System which offers to farmers the advantages of collective farming and the formation of the Confederation Generale de L'Agriculture are both important steps in the right direction. Artificial Insemination centres are being set up in certain areas, and are run on the same lines as those in England. Nearly two years ago the Monnet Plan included a programme for the development of the country's agriculture. As a result of these activities it is to be hoped that in the not too far distant future France will recover her pre-war status of producing nearly all the food she needs.

NORFOLK BROADS, EASTER, 1948

Ken started it all by saying he could sail! Not that his capabilities in this direction were disputed but everyone was a little doubtful at first. However minds were soon put at rest, for on being questioned Ken invariably gave such a dissertation on the technicalities of the subject that they left him a little overawed, and certain in their minds that at least he was well read on the matter. Further he had "handled boats" out East. The mass of tackle found on board the Florizel did, I feel, confuse our skipper a little, but with the aid of an old waterman, we had soon mastered the rudiments of sail hoisting and of how to manage winds on the beam and the quarter.

When under sail, we became so deeply engrossed in matters nautical that the idle chatter of the female members of the crew received no response whatever. Even their frantic report, that water was pouring through the fore-hatch only produced the reply that we were "sailing beautifully", and the matter was dismissed as mere female exaggeration. Nevertheless that night in a nearby pub. we were not above reporting the incident in florid terms to the remainder of the party who had gone ahead in two launches.

The next day's run included passing Yarmouth where the tide flowed at six knots. Owing to engine trouble, the speed of one of the cruisers was reduced to five knots, giving a total of minus one knot. The alternative to this was to get under weigh at seven a.m. and go down on the ebb-tide. Only after furious streams of "Blast you Stone!" from Ken was I persuaded to show a reluctant leg at that unearthly hour.

Determined to show off our new-found skill as sailors, we took a party from the cruisers for a "pleasure trip" and promptly rammed the bank several times whilst trying to master the gentle art of tacking which Ken had previously declared to be "child's play". Our stock fell abruptly although everyone was highly amused.

The restoration of our reputation occurred the following day, on Wrexham Broad, for with a fine breeze and ample room we were able to master the rudiments of sailing against the wind which the confined conditions of the river had debarred us from doing. The dinghies, also in attendance, were sailed by other members of the party. At the time of our pre-arranged rendezvous, Hugh, invisible apart from his head was seen at the other end of the Broad heading for Wrexham. Later we learnt that back on the river, sheltered by the trees, he had had to row for a spell during which he neatly rammed a thirty-foot yacht sailing in the same direction.

That same afternoon we had a successful minor engagement with the crew of the "Happy Times", a cheery gang of unshaven pirates who by crafty manoeuvring were blocking the river. Basil at the wheel tipped their stern and rammed them hard ashore. A confused action ensued; a salvo of garbage from the "Happy Times" was answered with a bucket of water from John Bedding over the head of the unfortunate helmsman, followed by smart evasive action. Friendly relations were re-established that night over several pints of the local brew and we accepted a challenge to race against each other in the yachts and dinghies. The first event of the day, a rowing race in dinghies, we won by three lengths but the morning's breeze had freshened into a young gale thus cancelling further activities for the day.

The strong wind held for the next two days and we continued the trip under power, watched enviously by stranded enthusiasts of the "sail only school". But on Friday the wind abated sufficiently for us to handle the boat under sail and with two reefs in we set off for Yarmouth. After two hours of (we think) good sailing we unexpectedly hit a submerged mud bank not shown on the chart. The Blue Eagle, using her shallow draught to advantage, towed us off again, and on dropping the tow rope the Florizel lodged herself snugly on the opposite bank. After a little adjustment to our rig we pushed off once more for Yarmouth and lunch, but instead found ourselves back on the mud bank. This procedure would probably have been repeated several times if the mast had not broken. A slow splintering of wood and the deck was a shambles of halyards, shrouds, sheets and sails. I will not dwell long on this incident, suffice it to say we reached Yarmouth that evening, but not before we had become soaked by the rain, and John Bedding, energetically stepping on nothing, had fallen overboard.

Yarmouth proved to be sympathetic for not only did we meet an old salt who appeared to have made a habit of breaking masts, but we all became very happy at yet another pub. Here Basil, amid much laughter, demonstrated how to milk cows by hand and machine, which, I fear, caused many an old-fashioned look from the regulars. Fortunately the owners were not in the least perturbed and even went as far as extending a cordial invitation to come again. This seemed to point to the fact that, if they did not like our sailing, at least they liked our company.

PROSPECTS OF EMPLOYMENT.

On April 7th—9th half-a-dozen students attended the Conference of Agricultural students at Reading, the subject being the prospects of employment for agricultural, horticultural, and dairying students. The conference provided an opportunity of hearing several eminent speakers give first hand information about employment open to qualified students, and also drew attention to some of the particular problems of agricultural students.

The main speakers were Prof. H. G. Saunders (Reading), Prof. J. A. Scott-Watson (Head of N.A.A.S.) and a team from the Colonial Office. When the Conference split into groups the Agricultural group was addressed by Dr. William Davies (Dodwell) and G. D. Stephenson (Headquarters, N.F.U.); the Horticultural group by Prof. Stoughton (Reading) and Mr. H. V. Taylor (N.A.A.S.); the Dairy group by Prof. Crossley (Reading) and J. White, Esq. (Manager, Fyfield Estate).

It was thought that the world shortage of food is likely to last. Medical science is rapidly increasing the world's population; which population agricultural science now has to feed. There is at last an appreciation of the value of science in farming, and the resulting prospects for employment, at home and abroad, are brighter than they have been for generations. However, we shall undoubtedly reach a saturation point if we continue training people at the present rate.

Good research workers are needed. For most research a degree in pure science is required, but for "husbandry" research an Hons. Agric., or post-graduate course are suitable. Research should not be glamourised; it requires integrity, patience, and a flair to interpret data. In fact, for all jobs one should consider one's character. For example, in advisory work, the ability to get on with farmers is as important as technical qualifications. The N.A.A.S. will need 800 people during the next four years. While initial salaries in commercial firms are higher, there are not the same prospects of progress and increasing salary as in the state service. It was thought that diploma students would not get very high in advisory work (although it provided useful experience) and would do better in practical farm management. For those with the right qualities there are increasing opportunities in teaching and journalism—with farm institutes, Young Farmers' Clubs, the press, various firms, and the new branch of the N.A.A.S.

The colonies need people, pay and leave are good, credit is given for war service, and there are great opportunities for the independent person really interested in the life.

The same general remarks apply to horticulture. There would appear to be many openings in teaching, and for degree people in the advisory service. The more independent type should aim to get into the practical side.

In dairying there is an acute shortage of men, but too many women are being trained. There are roughly 90 jobs available a year, 30 of them for N.D.D. 70% of the jobs are for men. There seem to be few salaried jobs for those with the N.D.D. (H.).

All speakers stressed that everyone should have a sound practical background as well as technical qualifications. Also that the ultimate job should suit the temperament, but that the most important thing was to make a success of the first job.

There were some aspects, such as practical farming, the Dominions, and poultry farming, which we thought were not dealt with enough, but the general opinion was that the Conference had given us a clearer picture of the prospects for agricultural students.

VARIETY.

It was on October 24th and 25th that freshers and old students were drawn together in the production of the "Haylarks". True to custom, the talent and ideas appeared at very short notice, and once the curtain rose, the joint producers, Mr. W. Wragg and Mr. R. Herring, could see that their efforts had not been wasted. Besides producing the show, they also took part in it as artists and were responsible for compering and for much of the script.

The fact that the script was original, seemed to give it a freshness often lacking in professional performances. In a wholly enjoyable evening, it is hard to select individual acts for special attention, but perhaps one may draw attention to two.

Mr. C. D. Hendon gave us a delightful change from comedy with his rendering of "Lonely Road" and "Danny Boy". And we were all very pleased when he was good enough to give us an encore. "Spike Harrow and his Hayseeds" swung us once more into comedy, and Miss Jean Wiltshire's xylophone solo gave us time to regain our breath from laughing.

The ingenuity of the backstagers combined to present a pleasing effect, right from the start. R. Norman and his assistants handled the lighting, etc., admirably. While Mrs. N. McDermott and Mr. R. B. Shaw lent their skill for advice and execution of make up. Our thanks are due to all the students and staff, whose combined efforts gave so much pleasure to us all.

THE PLAY.

For their Silver Anniversary the School of Agriculture Dramatic Society presented "How Are They at Home" a comedy in two acts by J. B. Priestley. Performances were given on February 12th, 13th and 14th, and on each occasion there was an excellent attendance.

The Play was originally written especially for the forces overseas, but was nevertheless much appreciated by the student and the outside audiences at Sutton Bonington. Perhaps the political aspect of the play was open to criticism, but one was inclined to overlook this because the standard of acting was so very high. Special mention must be made of Mr. Marples for his most impressive portrayal of the family butler, and to Mr. Hendon for the way he played the difficult part of the American Army Officer. Miss Holden gave a polished yet delightfully free portrayal of Lady Farfield, and Miss Bate and Mr. Ayling gave that touch of humour so necessary to keep the play alive.

The cast was as follows:—

Hilda Packet	Pamela Coverley.
Kenton	H. J. S. Marples.
Eileen Stocks	Barbara Clack.
Sam Cawthra	J. B. Smith.
Lotta Schulberg	Nancy Bate.
Lady Farfield	Beryl Holden.
Pauline Chester	Barbara Saweard.
Major George Webber	C. D. Hendon.
Raymond Killigrew	D. Ayling.
Commodore Pentworthy	Mary Teesdale.
Group-Captain Edward Camyon	K. W. Ward.
Squadron-Leader Tony Acton	J. W. Stone.
Corporal Packet	D. Graham.

Other parts by:—M. R. Adams, Elisabeth Bates, Heather Cooper, June Morley, Dorothy Bennett, Kathleen Hosker, Ann Shorten, Marion Johnson and Marjorie Abbott.

Once again a great deal of credit must be given to Mrs. McDermott who produced the play, and to Mr R. F. Norman and his assistants who worked so hard behind the scenes. Mr. R. B. Shaw was in charge of make-up, and the newly formed Arts Society undertook publicity.

A cheque for £15 0s. 7d. was forwarded to the Kingston and District Nursing Association, being the proceeds after expenses had been deducted.

R. R. HERRING (Hon. Sec.).

HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

We have had several visiting lecturers during the session who have covered a wide range of horticultural subjects. Mr. B. S. Furneaux, M.Sc., gave an excellent talk on "The Quest for Horticultural Soils", describing the interpretation of soil anger results and approaching the problems of the soil from the growers' viewpoint. Dr. H. G. H. Kearns of Long Ashton Research Station spoke on "Horticultural Machinery" with special reference to equipment for the modern Fruit Farm. This was followed by a practical demonstration of the spraying machine recently acquired by the horticultural department.

On March 5th Mr. J. Rhodes, N.D.H., presented a lecture on "Irrigation of Horticultural Crops" together with some interesting slides. Mr. Rhodes dealt essentially with the practical application of irrigation both to outdoor vegetable crops and to crops in double span frames and glasshouses.

Early in the summer term a film show of colour films loaned by Plant Protection Ltd. was arranged. The selection incorporated films on lawns, roses and green vegetables all the year round. Further indoor meetings were then discontinued as summer excursions to nurseries, Kew Gardens, Chelsea, etc., were arranged by the department.

K. JEAN WILTSHIRE (Secretary).

DISCUSSION SOCIETY.

A full and varied programme has been presented by the Society this session.

Apart from the attendance of outside lecturers at the meetings, a Discussion Circle, formed by the Student Body, was innovated during the Easter Term. Here a subject was thrown open to the floor, and thoroughly debated upon and discussed by the students themselves.

This type of meeting is the primary aim of such a Society, invoking ideas and opinions often of complete originality, and it is hoped that the Discussion Circle would continue to grow and flourish.

A "Staff Brains Trust" proved to be one of the highlights of this session's programme. A very knowledgeable Trust, composed of Prof. Robinson, Messrs. Ling, Calder, Grant, and Ivins, with Mrs. Brown and Miss Ford putting forward the feminine viewpoint, took the platform. "Bill" Cragg, as Question Master, fulfilled his task admirably, rivalling McCullough in versatility and wit. The questions (sent in by students) were most ably expounded upon and disposed of by the varying opinions of the Trust; a most interesting and often humorous evening ensued.

A debate on "Should Co-education be Universal?" also provoked some lively discussion, Mr. Calder, as usual, handling the meeting with great tact and delicacy (plus not a little humour). The motion, however, was sadly defeated.

Amongst the outside lecturers who attended the meetings those worthy of particular mention include Dr. John Hammond, "The Improvement of Cattle"; Mr. J. L. Davies of the M.M.B. and Mr. Morley Davies, who gave an illustrated lecture on "Deficiency Diseases in Plants".

From U.C.N. we had Prof. Chesters and Mr. Metheringham Laming, speaking on "Music for All".

A far cry from agriculture came in the form of a travel film on "Northern India", by Graham Woodmanstone, transporting the weary student to of hemispheres!

It is hoped that the above-mentioned events are merely the forerunners of an even more successful programme of meetings to be enjoyed next session.

Hon. President: Prof. H. G. Robinson. President: C. D. Hendon.
Secretary: Miss K. Hamilton. Treasurer: J. Throstle.
Magazine Secretary: Miss R. Powell—and one Fresher to be elected.

The Student Christian Movement is open to students of all nationalities and denominations. The only condition of membership is the desire to understand the Christian Faith and live the Christian Life.

A morning Service is held daily in the Main Hall at 8.50 a.m. A study group has weekly evening meetings on the Christian's responsibility in rural life and talks are given by outside speakers on a number of interesting subjects.

THE ARTS SOCIETY.

Chairman : John B. Smith. Secretary : Miss R. Powell.
Treasurer : Miss R. Worman.

During the first term of the current session a new venture in the history of the College was launched. The Arts Society held its first meeting on the 18th of November, 1947.

It received immediate support from staff and students alike, and the early success of the Society was due in no small way to the enthusiastic secretarial guidance of Miss R. Powell.

Our first public appearance was a record recital of popular classical music by Mr. R. Wilson, B.Sc., who delighted everyone with his touches of humour between items.

Before Christmas we undertook the production of cards and gift labels, and the results of individual and combined "practical evenings" were eagerly sought after by students, the proceeds forming a basis for further work by the Society.

Although we began our existence allied to the Nottingham Club, a general desire for independence led us to becoming a separate group, supported financially by the Executive Committee in return for 15% of any profits. This was effected on the 1st of December, 1947, and on the same date the Committee was extended by the election of Miss E. Bates as Drama Society Representative and of Miss M. Betts as Musical Member.

During the spring term members successfully decorated the set for the Drama Society play, organising at the same time a competition for the best poster, which was deservedly won by Miss J. Thomas.

Our proudest day, however, was the 6th of May, 1948, when we presented an Arts Gala. Professor and Mrs. Robinson and Miss Tonathy graciously consented to judge the amazing number of exhibits, which were both varied and of a high standard. As a result of this unenviable task, Mrs. Robinson presented Miss M. Close with the first prize for a beautifully embroidered picture canvas; Miss R. Powell with the second prize for a clay model, and the third prize went to Mr. J. Begbie for a group of photographs. The following were also highly commended.

Mr. P. Gosden for a pencil drawing of G. B. Shaw, Miss J. Betts for a smocked blouse, Miss R. Powell for cushion-cover designs, and Miss P. Mitten for a line drawing of a horse. Mention must also be made of work shown by Miss N. Fletcher, and of two groups of woodcuts loaned by Professor Robinson. Mrs. Brough, a member of the W.I. of Castle Donington, who also judged the exhibits, brought a large show of excellent needlework and handy crafts, and gave an amusing and instructive talk during the evening. We were also entertained by songs from Mr. P. Hendon, accompanied at the piano by Mr. K. Ward, poetry read by Miss B. Holden and Miss B. Saweard, and gramophone records presented by Mr. R. Wilson, B.Sc. £1 6s. was forwarded to the Lord Mayor of London Fund for European Children as a result of a silver collection taken during the evening.

The Society can be extremely proud of its attainments during its first year, and we look forward to providing our fellow students next session with entertainment of a kind which is at once interesting and instructive.

Miss M. Walker, J. B. Smith, R. R. Herring, Miss P. Mitten.

With the arrival of a new amplifier for the Loose Box, this year's J.C.R. were able to run dances every Wednesday and Saturday this session, which were a great success, and an allowance from the Exec. has made possible the purchase of up-to-date records to modernise the collection which already existed.

New pictures made an appearance, these were the beginning of a scheme of improvements for the J.C.R., which is still in progress of development. Fires were lit by the Committee every evening until the installation of central heating last term.

The Committee arranged the end of term dance for the Xmas term and are due to arrange the end of session one, which no doubt will be as successful. For the Easter and Xmas dances the library was organised as a sitting out lounge and at Easter a very successful venture was the provision of a bar in the Loose Box, both features being well supported. Sunday morning drinks have been served in the J.C.R. since the middle of the Easter term and our thanks are due to Messrs, Norman, Barratt and Woodward for their services in this direction.

We were very sorry to lose our chairman, Mr. W. H. Cragg, during the Easter term, who resigned owing to pressure of work, but his place has been well filled by Mr. J. W. Stone.

MEN'S TENNIS CLUB, 1948.

Captain: F. Hall.

Secretary: R. J. Wellington.

Committee: D. Ayling, J. Whilde.

The team opened the season with a comfortable win against U.C. Leicester, but were unlucky in having the next two matches cancelled due to rain. Playing against Loughborough College 2nd, the team met stiff opposition but managed to gain a narrow victory. The Club playing against Players of Nottingham were unfortunate in not having its strongest team available, Hall and Watson being unable to play, the team suffered a major defeat against a much stronger team.

In the following match against U.C. Leicester the team regained its form with a comfortable win.

Results:—

U.C. Leicester	Won	7—1 (1 drawn).
Loughborough College 2nd	Won	5—4.
J. Players & Sons	Lost	9—0.
U.C. Leicester	Won	7—2.

NETBALL CLUB, 1947-48 SEASON.

Out of twelve matches only five were played, four of which were lost by the College.

Although the results were disappointing, due mainly to weakness in our goal area, the matches were very enjoyable.

We were also unfortunate in not having a team to play against to give us the much needed practice.

BERYL J. WIBBERLEY (Hon. Sec.).

WOMEN'S HOCKEY CLUB, 1947-48.

This season has been more successful than the previous one. The weather did not handicap us, and very few fixtures had to be cancelled due to bad weather.

We were fortunate in having Miss K. Hamilton, who played a very good defence, and several other first year members to make up our team, and the results were encouraging. The away match lost was to U.C.W. 1st XI.

The team was captained by Miss M. G. R. Walker, who played a very reliable game on the half line, and represented us in the U.C.W. 1st XI.

I would like to thank Mr. Wood for umpiring all our home matches.

Results: Played 10, Won 8, Drawn 1, Lost 1.

Goals: For 51, Against 17.

Captain : K. Shuttleworth. Secretary : A. P. L. Casling.

Committee : P. C. M. Dashford, H. Darby and E. Lamming.

This was the most successful season that the Club has ever had. A full fixture list was carried through, with only three cancellations due to bad weather. In all 35 games were played, of which 26 were won, 8 lost and one drawn. The goal average was outstanding, the Club netting 180 times to their opponents 62. The forward line was consistently good. P. Bashforth scored 60 times and J. Coulthurst 54.

From November to February fourteen consecutive victories were recorded before Trent College snatched a victory in the last minute of a vigorous struggle. Notable victories included a Player's XI by 16-0; University College, Leicester by 6-1 and 11-2; R.A.F., Hucknall 10-0; and Mundella School 11-0. Two excellent games were played against U.C.N. 1st XI, both of which were lost by an odd goal.

Altogether 20 students represented the School of Agriculture in various matches.

Thanks are due to Mr. Wood and Miss Bere for umpiring many of our matches.

Colours have been awarded to K. Shuttleworth, T. Harris, H. Darby (who also played for U.C.N.), P. Bashford and J. Coulthurst.

CRICKET CLUB.

At the time of going to press the season has produced both some excellent games and some very wet weather. We were unfortunate in having to cancel two games and to abandon another when we were in a very strong position.

Our greatest difficulty has been lack of time and facilities for reliable practice. After a rather doubtful start to the season the team has picked up very well, and since the first three games has had continuous success.

All club members are indeed very grateful to Mr. Martyr and the horticultural staff for the very grand job they have done in leveling the square and we feel that when it has been marled future generations will reap even fuller benefit than ourselves.

We were all very pleased to hear that Miss M. Abbott and Miss D. Hendon have had success in C.U.N. women's 1st cricket XI, and we should offer our congratulations to Miss D. Hendon in being chosen for a county trial.

H. P. LEGGETT (Hon. Sec.).

SCHOOL OF AGRICULTURE RUGBY FOOTBALL CLUB.

Captain : W. H. Cragg. Vice-Captain : C. Jenkins.

Hon. Sec. : R. D. Dunn. Committee : P. J. Woodward, H. Harpham.

The season 1947-48 will probably be recorded as an outstanding one in the history of the Rugger Club, both socially and from a playing point of view the Club has had a very successful season and despite losing the first three matches of the season went on to win 19 of the matches played, drawing 2 and losing 7. Points for 401. Points against 144.

This season the team has been led by W. H. Cragg, whose brilliant play and leadership both on and off the field have played a big part in the Club's successes.

The nucleus of last year's team was strengthened considerably by an influx of keen ex-service players, mostly with club experience behind them and although it is difficult to pick out names from a team which played as a team, C. Jenkins, who should make a first rate skipper next year, H. Harpham, a full-back, and I. Ford, a back-row forward, played consistently well.

G. W. Battersby, C. R. Jacobs and R. M. Watson were selected to play for the University College Nottingham First XV. and are to be congratulated on gaining their colours.

The annual "blood" match against Harper Adams Agricultural College produced a very good game with both sides evenly matched. Sutton Bonington being perhaps slightly superior in the back division. The first score came from the visitors, when M. Miller, the Harper Adams captain took advantage of an unlucky bounce for the Sutton Bonington full-back and dribbled over to score; the try was not converted. Half-time: Harper Adams 3 points, School of Agriculture nil. After half-time the College pressed strongly and play was kept mostly in the Harper Adams' half. A good threequarter movement resulted in Donaldson making an opening for Cragg to score wide of the posts; the kick failed and despite continued attempts to add the extra points, good tackling and defensive touch kicking by Harper Adams resulted in a 3 points draw.

In the return match at Newport, the School of Agriculture just managed to win by a goal to a drop-goal. Cragg forcing his way over in the last few minutes after a pass from Barratt. The winning points were added by Marples with a magnificent kick from the touch line.

This season we have had a full complement of genuine three-quarters. This obviated last year's main team-building troubles when wing forwards had to be withdrawn from the pack, the scrum half position has caused quite a few headaches amongst the Committee however, but mention must be made of Jack Woodward, a wing forward, who has demonstrated his versatility by playing some very good games from this position.

The home match with U.C.N. also provided good Rugby with the College losing by the one try in the closing stages of a well fought game, no mean achievement against a club sporting nearly eighty playing members and fielding three XV's. After the match both Clubs attended a "Rugger" supper at the "Plough", Normanton, a very enjoyable evening resulted. Mr. Reg. Farthing's rendering of "Salome" being particularly well received.

The Club has been very fortunate in securing a new pitch on the site of the old Soccer pitch and our thanks are due to Mr. Martyr and his staff for effecting a quick change-over in the Christmas vacation so that no fixtures were cancelled. Finally may we thank all those supporters who braved the winter winds and "rigours" of away matches to shout encouragement from the touch line; also those willing young ladies who saved our funds and eyesight by repairing many a tattered shirt.

It is to be hoped that this season's successes and keen team spirit will repeat themselves in a similar manner in the season to come.

SECRETARIES' REPORT.

At the time of going to press the membership of the Association stands at 471, consisting of 330 life members and 141 annual members. This figure shows an increase of 59 over last year, but is not yet up to the record membership of 520 in 1946.

The reminders sent out at the beginning of the year brought in an appreciable number of subscriptions, but there are still many old students who have allowed their membership to lapse. We appeal, therefore, to members to help us in drawing the attention of their friends to the Association. The annual subscription is now five shillings and life membership four guineas.

As readers will see, additional information has been provided in the list of members of the Association. It is hoped that these particulars regarding course, period of residence, etc., will be of interest. We realise that there are omissions and possibly errors; it is hoped, therefore, that members will inform us of any discrepancies.

We would like to remind members that the Personal Notes section of the Magazine is of the greatest interest to old students, and we are always glad to receive items for this.

The Annual Reunion held on December 20th, 1947, proved to be very successful and enjoyable. Owing to the difficulties of transport the attendance of 150 was lower than in previous years, but we had the satisfaction of being able to accommodate everyone who wished to come.

The Committee is considering the possibility of a Summer Reunion in 1948. The suggested date is Friday, 23rd July, and notification will be given in due course.

Sports fixtures were arranged for 14th February this year, but owing to lack of response due to travelling difficulties, and the demands of spring cultivations, the Rugger match had to be cancelled. The mixed hockey team which met the Students' Second XI won by five goals to two; Messrs. C. A. Stanger and G. Holmes scoring for the Association. Miss E. M. Stewart should be mentioned for her fine defensive game at left half.

Future Sports Fixtures are as follows:—

May 29th—Tennis and Cricket.

November 20th—Rugger and Mixed Hockey.

We should be glad to receive early notification from any members who wish to take part in any future games.

We should like, on behalf of the Association, to take this opportunity of expressing our thanks to Professor Robinson for his friendly interest, and also the hospitality and facilities granted to us during the past year.

MARJORIE BRINDLEY,
R. SCOTT,
(Joint Hon. Secretaries).

MEMORIAL FUND

The Committee of M.A.C.O.S.A. has decided to sponsor an appeal for a fund, the proceeds of which will be used to provide a memorial at the College for all old students who fell in the last war. The appeal, which will be made during the summer, will be addressed to all old students whether or not they are members of M.A.C.O.S.A. As far as possible a personal appeal will be sent to each one, but so many of the addresses available are out of date that it will be impossible to get in touch with everyone in this way. It will be most helpful, therefore, if members in addition to supporting the appeal themselves, will bring it to the attention of any old students they happen to know.

Contributions however small (or large) will be welcome and should be addressed to Miss M. Brindley, School of Agriculture, Sutton Bonington, Loughborough. Cheques and postal orders should be made payable to R. Burt Shaw.

The train left on Friday morning so all the boat people were sent out to West Lake transit camp, 12 miles south of Capetown. On the ride out you soon realised that you were not in England any more. There were colonial type houses and shops, and the shacks of the Cape Coloureds. We went round Capetown and into the mountains just behind. It seemed a pleasant enough place with modern buildings and excellent shops. There were a lot of American cars on the streets and only a few British. The standard of driving is low (almost as bad as it is at home) the drivers accelerating hard whenever possible, and braking hard whenever they are held up. The train journey was not too bad, though the train could have been better equipped. The country soon got "boring" but we were lucky as it had been raining and it was cooler and not as dusty and dried up. We had a day in Bulawayo which is famous for its wide streets. I finally arrived in Salisbury on the 9th March and was met by Dr. Makings in the new Chevrolet Fleetmaster which was a contrast to the Morris 8. We went up to his office and then up to Mount Hampden Camp (ex R.A.F.) where I am now staying. It is 13 miles out of Salisbury and is quite comfortable."

K. W. B. Allen (1933-5) is now representative for Quaker Oats Ltd. in the College area.

Miss E. Nuttall (1939-40) assisted on the Poultry Farm at College during the summer prior to taking a course of training to be a school teacher.

Colin Kell (1943-5) writes: "I am manager on a 300 acre farm, which consists of 150 acres arable, 120 acres of fruit orchards, and strawberries and the remainder made up of nurseries and market garden land. In addition we are breeding Large White and Large Black pigs." The farm is near Wisbech.

Our best wishes to Mr. L. Bannister (1945-7) and Miss M. E. Nicholls (1946-8) on their recent engagement.
